FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, JUNE 7.

Yesterday we received the Paris papers to the 3d instant inclusive. Barthelemy's acceptance of the place of the new director is the principal article they contain. Paris is perfectly tranquil.

Yesterday a dispatch was received in town from Calais, stating that a courier had been sent off to Paris the moment the flag of truce arrived from hence, and that the answer would be immediately transmitted to this country as soon as received.

Yesterday dispatches were received at the admiralty from admiral Duncan, dated off the Texel. He went very close in, and saw above seventy vessels of different kinds, about 14 of which appeared to be of the line, and ready for sea.

Yesterday morning lord Keith arrived at the admiralty from Sheerness. Captain Knight of the Montague, of 74 guns, and his lady are also arrived. He obtained permission, on his parole, to come on shore for three days, and to bring his wife with him. He had yesterday several conferences with the admiralty board.

Yesterday an express arrived at Mr. Dundas's office from Sheerness, bringing advice that the Serapis store ship, of 44 guns, capt. Duncan, and a sloop of war, had escaped from the mutinous fleet in the night, but the Serapis is very much damaged from the shot of the rebel ships. Two other ships attempted to escape, but were overpowered. All communication between the shore and the fleet is cut off.

The four men of war from admiral Duncan's fleet at Yarmouth, as mentioned in yesterday's Star, arrived at the Nore yesterday morning.

Sir Erasmus Gower left town yesterday morning to hoist his broad pendant on board of the Neptune. A full board of admiralty, consisting of the seven lords, yesterday signed the declaration, that the ships at the Nore were in a state of rebellion.

Upon the arrival of vice-admiral Farley at Yarmouth, he had several conversations with the crews of the ships which have since gone to the Nore. All he could learn from them was, that they shoud do whatever their delegates, who were gone to the Nore, should, upon their return, direct, and that there were several grievances that they would have redressed, but which they did not specify.

Last night a council was held at lord Grenville's office, at which all the ministers were present, to come to a final determination of the methods to be pursued for quelling the mutiny on board the fleet at the Nore. At the breaking up of the deliberations, a messenger was sent off with the printed act of parliament, which received the royal assent yesterday afternoon by commission.

Yesterday, notices from government were left at the houses throughout the several parishes in Westminster, requiring the inhabitants to hold themselves in readiness to arm in defence of the country!

JUNE 8.

The messenger sent to Paris has returned and brought for answer to the application of the British ministry, that the directory are ready to enter upon a negociation with Great-Britain, and will receive an ambassador for that purpose. A passport was accordingly granted.

A new treaty of amity and commerce has been made and ratified between Great-Britain and Russia.

A captain of a neutral vessel has brought intelligence from the Texel, that a serious mutiny prevailed in the Dutch fleet: That the seamen complained of want of provisions, and had sent on shore the troops destined for the intended expedition.

JUNE 12.

MUTINY AT THE NORE.

The names of the ships that escaped on Friday are the Repulse and Leopard—The Ardent has since come in. Other vessels we find manifested a desire of returning to their duty, and this grumbling condition of the mutinous, arising hopes of every ship dropping off speedily, hopes which seemed to be realized on Saturday forenoon.

The demands of the seamen conveyed to the admiralty by lord Northesk, were thought by government improper, and captain Knight carried down the refusal. The delegates received captain Knight with the greatest respect, they altered their demands, and dispatched him to town with them early on Sunday morning. Soon after his leaving the fleet the red flag was taken down, and other colours placed instead; a circumstance which gave rise to the report of the whole having returned to their duty. The motives for taking down the red flag are variously reported. Some say it was intended as a compliment to captain Knight; others that it was a signal for the merchantmen, hitherto detained, to proceed to their places of destination, an indulgence which we imagine the delegates had been induced to grant in consequence of the representations of captain Knight. But whatever were the motives, the red flag was struck, and all the vessels that had been detained set sail. Yesterday the whole Thames was covered with vessels coming up to London. Such a croud of ships never perhaps came by one tide to this port; and we are in hopes that the navigation of the river will no longer be interrupted.

On Saturday every red flag was again hoisted by the fleet; and yesterday at one o'clock was flying on 21 vessels at the Nore. We are sorry to find that government cannot comply with the demands of the seamen, either brought by lord Northesk or Capt. Knight; and that the seamen still refuse to return to their duty.

The mutineers, we believe, understood early yesterday morning that ministers would not grant what they had asked through the means of Capt. Knight, and in consequence they framed a fresh set of articles to be sent to the admiralty; and sent them to town by Capt. Cobb, who landed yesterday about 12 o'clock at Southend, and arrived in a post-chaise and four at the Admiralty about five o'clock. We cannot say whether the propositions he has brought will be acceded to; but we have reason to think they will not.

We understand ministers have resolved not to grant any thing, but to force the sailors to unconditional submission. The Montague and Nassau in particular have, we understand, expressed a desire of returning to their duty, and it was reported last night that 12 sail had actually deserted; but, on the authority of our correspondence, we can positively contradict such a rumor.

Last night Capt. Knight and Lieutenant Buller set off from the admiralty with the answer of government to the propositions brought up by Capt. Cobb, and we fear the answer is unfavorable.

Both on Saturday after the arrival of Capt. Knight, and yesterday after the arrival of Capt. Cobb, the cabinet ministers assembled, and directed the answer that was to be given.

Various were the reports respecting delegate Parker yesterday, some saying he had escaped, some he was taken, &c. We believe them all false, and that he still acts on board the fleet as usual. He is very cautious and circumspect, and drinks nothing but water.

Letters have been received at the admiralty from Admiral Duncan, dated off the Texel on the 5th inst. On the 3d he stood close into the Texel, with only two ships of the line. On the 4th he was joined by two of the ships from Portsmouth; and on the 5th he cast anchor in the mouth of the Texel, with the view of drawing the Dutch fleet to sea. They semed, however, to shew no disposition to move.

Ismael Effendi, the new Turkish ambassador destined for our court, arrived at Leghorn on the 11th of last month.

Yesterday lieutenant Forbes, accompanied by one other officer, attended at the admiralty, with a seaman of the name of Wilson, one of the delegates of the Lancaster, who acted as their agent while in a state of mutiny. He underwent a long examination before Mr. Justice Ford, and the lords commissioners, but having with the rest returned to his duty within the limited time, on his majesty's pardon being offered; he was, after being reprimanded, sent down again with his officers to the ship.

The Neptune of 98 guns, captain sir Erasmus Gower, and the Agincourt of 64 guns, Capt. Williamson, dropped down the river by yesterday afternoon's tide, on their way to the Downs. The Neptune will take in her guns and ammunition at Perfleet.

The Duke of Portland, Mr. Pitt, and Mr. Windham, attended with Earl Spencer, and the lords commissioners, yesterday at the admiralty.

A curious act came to our knowledge last night; namely, that Doyle, one of the delegates of the Grampus, sent up to town about three weeks ago, was pressed and carried on board the Enterprise Tender off the tower: where he contrived to corrupt the whole crew, as well those who were pressed, as those who entered voluntarily on board, and that ship was actually in a state of mutiny several days.

Capt. Calvert, one of the elder brethren of the Trinity-house, went under the stern of the Sandwich, at the Nore, on Saturday last, and was permitted to go on board, where he employed his influence in endeavoring to persuade the mutineers to return to their duty. After staying some time he was permitted to depart, on his promising to visit them again on his return from Broad-stairs.

SHEERNESS, SUNDAY MORNING.

I mentioned in my last, when I communicated the defection of the Repulse and Leopard, that a very heavy fire was then commenced at the Nore, which I suppose, arose from some of the ships attempting to get away—that was the case. The Ardent at ten at night, the tide being then full, and the wind blowing strong in for Sheerness, let go her anchor, and all standing bore away from the fleet.

She got some distance, when the Monmouth, slipped her head-fast, and putting a spring on it to bring her up, poured a broadside at the Ardent, but fortunately not a shot struck her.

The Ardent still got on, and the Monmouth kept working down upon her—the Ardent at length, turning up in the wind's eye, suddenly ran out her guns, and fired a broadside at the Monmouth, which, we understand, killed ten, and wounded sixteen men.

She then weared, and fired another broad side, which did no damage, the shot dropping short of the Monmouth; the Ardent at length got away, and is moored in this harbor, just within the birth of the Repulse.

Six o'clock, P. M.

A heavy cannonading has been heard here all this afternoon. On enquiring I learn, that the people in the Iris had differed among themselves respecting the hauling down the red flag and hoisting the union, as a signal of return to obedience, the red flag men got the better in the end, with loss of several men wounded on both sides, but none killed—another account states, that 13 were killed.

Parker shifted his flag this morning from the Sandwich to the Montague of 74 guns; and the court of delegates of course shifted with him.

Eight o'clock, P. M.

I am informed that one officer was killed and three wounded in the scuffle on board the Iris. Just at the sun's leaving the horison, I took an observation, and found 16 red flags flying.

Since noon the refractory ships in general have had, and still have the following colours: A red flag at the fore, union at the main, and blue at the mizen.

Several of the ships have shifted their ensigns, and hoisted a blue flag in their stead.

Sunday, June 11.

The delegates of the fleet, finding themselves deserted by so many of their companions, despair of being able to effect their purpose; and according to the best information that I can collect, they are willing to return to their duty, provided his majesty's pardon be extended to them, in common with their deluded brethren. An intimation to this effect was yesterday made to Admiral Buckner; and as a proof of the sincerity of their wishes, they have struck for a time the red flag of defiance, and hoisted the union flag in its place, permitting, at the same time, several merchantmen detained by them, to depart up the Thames. This amicable display, was however, of very short duration—for on being informed that it was the intention of government that the ringleaders should legally answer for their crimes, the emblem of defiance was again hoisted, and there are at this moment 14 or 15 red flags flying at the Nore. In the mean time Admiral Buckner had sent to the admiralty for fresh instructions with respect to the future conduct to be observed towards the mutineers. Captain Knight of the Montague, who has set out for town, is the bearer of the admiral's letters: the answer of their lordships to which, will decide the fate of the delegates. Lieutenants Ryder and Buller, in the Nassau and Repulse, also set out yesterday for London to give some necessary information to the lords of the Admiralty respecting the present condition of the fleet. The ships which escaped yesterday are now under the protection of the batteries. The rampart facing the Nore is fully manned—the red hot balls continue in a state of preparation.

On Captain Knight's coming on shore yesterday, he was instantly waited upon by lieutenants Herford, Scott, and Champion, belonging to his ship, who had been sent on shore by the crew, and otherwise ill-treated, and who heartily congratulated him on the favorable appearance which matters began to assume. Most of the merchant ships which were detained by the mutineers have proceeded on their voyage up the river.

Sunday evening.

I have just now been off to take an observation of the Nore fleet—but I could not count more than sixteen flags flying.

CHATHAM, SUNDAY, JUNE 11.

The important event which took place on Friday evening, was the beginning of the rupture amongst the mutineers; all the inhabitants of these towns were alarmed by the firing of guns which was distinctly heard from Brompton-Hill. The Leopard and the Repulse first got away; the former is now at Gravesend, where some of the ringleaders of her crew have been taken into custody. The Repulse in endeavouring to escape into Sheerness, just at the time of low water, run aground, and in that situation was repeatedly fired upon by the Monmouth and the Iris, the former of which fired no less than 80 shot. Very fortunately no lives were lost on board the Repulse; but the first lieutenant had his leg shot off. About nine o'clock she arrived very much damaged, at Sheerness. At eleven the same night we had another alarm; the Ardent, in making her escape, fired a broadside into the Monmouth, by which ten men on board that ship were killed. During the confusion, a number of merchantmen and colliers made their escape from under the guns of the mutinous fleet.

Rochester bridge is guarded day and night by the citizens of the corporation. A bar is thrown across it, and all persons are examined. A sailor who stole away from the Warrior was last night discovered attempting to pass the bridge in woman's clothes. He was taken up and sent on board his ship, where he is a prisoner.

Two fish carriages, each of them bringing twelve sailors, who have been picked up about Gravesend, Northfleet and the Matches, came in under the escort of a party of the 10th dragoons.

PORTSMOUTH, JUNE 10.

Yesterday morning the channel fleet, under the command of lord Bridport, were discovered from Maker Tower, coming up from the westward, on which the union jack was hoisted, and kept up till 4 o'clock P. M. when they disappeared; this afternoon they hove in sight again, close hauled, with their heads towards the shore, with the wind at W. N. W. It is supposed they will go to Torbay as a quantity of bullocks are ordered to be killed for them.

Lord Bridport's fleet have been hovering off that port these two days; we have the pleasure to say every thing remains very quiet among them.

DUBLIN, JUNE 2.

Accounts of a very disastrous nature have arrived this day from several quarters—from Cork, that Admiral Kingsmill's fleet have sent their officers on shore, and every thing is in confusion; but the particulars have not come to hand.

Twelve devoted houses have been racked and gutted by the military and Orangemen under their protection, in Belfast. A small village near Newry is burnt to the ground. Mr. Luke Teeling, secretary to the Antrim meeting for a dismission of ministers and reform, has had his bleach-green and works destroyed in like manner.

A member of a corps of Yeomanry has been tried for being an United Irishman; he was sentenced to be shot, and has been sent to Blair's camp for execution. Another, a serjeant to the Attorney's corps in Dublin, has been tried in like manner, for seditious words and neglect of orders. The sentence is not yet known.

In fine, terror is arrived to such a pitch, that many are coming in about Newry, to swear a forced oath of allegiance, and obtain tickets of loyalty. A deluge is ready to burst and they are banking it out with sand.

FRANCE.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTORY,

19 PRAIRIAL—JUNE 7.

Extract from the Proces Verbal of the sitting of the Executive Directory, on the 11th Prairial, June 6.

In the fifth year of the French republic one and indivisible, on the 11th Prairial, (June 6.) at one o'clock, the members of the directory, with the secretary, assembled en costume, in order to receive citizen Barthelemi, the new member of the directory, elected to succeed citizen Letourneur, gone out by lot. The ministers dressed en costume, attended at the same hour the sitting of the directory for the same purpose.

The secretary-general and the minister of the interior were directed to repair to the residence of citizen Barthelemi, that the directory invited him to join that body. They accordingly set out, preceded by two messengers of state and four attendants.

On their arrival at citizen Barthelemi's, they were introduced, and informed him that the directory were ready to receive him. The new director, accompanied by the officers of state, went in a procession to the usual place of holding their sittings. A line formed by the directorial guard, indicated the passage. Martial music announced his progress, and the most distinguished salutes were formed by the military. The etat major of the directorial local guard were drawn up in the hall appropriated by the minister, through which citizen Barthelemi was conducted to the hall where the sittings were held.

After receiving from his new colleagues the fratenal embrace citizen Barthelemi was installed in the office of member of the directory.

Alexandria, August 12.

Abstract of the news in the Hamburg papers brought by the America, capt. Ewing, arrived at Philadelphia.

The Prince and Princess of Wirtemburg were arrived at Cuxhaven on their way to Hanover.

A passenger from Dover reported at Hamburg the 9th of June, that Mr. Pitt had been displaced.

The report of the death of the Pope is unfounded.

In Naples the revolutionary spirit continues to be much dreaded.

A revolution broke out at Genoa the 22d May. French troops have been sent from Milan to Genoa.

The municipality of Venice have recommended the tri-coloured cockade consisting of green, white and red. The Doge had resigned his office, and the Nobility have also resigned their immunities; in the room of which a democratic form of government is to take place, and the title of Citizen is universal. French troops have taken possession of Venice, and the republic is to be divided into departments, on the French plan.

The King of Prussia was recovered from his indisposition, and had been at the Opera.

The Venetian Commissioners have concluded a peace with General Buonaparte. The Conditions are as follow—

1. The Terra Firma of Venice shall remain in possession of France; a part of it shall be restored so soon as the political system of Italy shall be wholly adjusted.

2. The port of Venice shall be wholly possessed by French troops. A part of the arsenals and the Venetian fleet shall be at the disposition of France.

3. The republic of Venice shall pay 30 millions of livres.

4. All those who have been arrested on account of their political sentiments shall be immediately set at liberty.

5. The Venetian Government shall undergo a total renovation.

This last article is already carried into effect. The Senate and the council of ten have received their dismission, and a provisional administration has been established. The democratic part of the people have all the power; the tree of liberty has already been planted in the place of St. Mark. The three state inquisitors are arrested, and wait their punishment.

When the Doge of Venice put the question to the Senate, whether they would resign their office into the hands of a commission, to be established by Buonaparte, it was carried 710 against 5.

Republican principles are creeping into the dominions of Turkey, and the Pacha of Widdin has published a manifesto, declaring himself independent of the Porte; as the Pacha of Scutari had done before.

The emperor of Russia has published an edict, fixing the line of succession to the throne in the male descendents of his family, and in default of males, in the female issue of the last monarch.

Letters from London advise, that notwithstanding the bank issued no specie, yet specie was current in great plenty, and paper has suffered no depreciation. The bank was expected to begin to pay specie the 24th June. An account had been taken of the specie in possession of the bank and banking houses; and the amount was found to exceed thirty millions. There was a general determination to support administration, and stocks rising.

The senate of Hamburg have openly recognized the French republic, and the French wear the national cockade in that city.

FROM THE GAZETTE OF THE UNITED STATES, AUGUST 3.

The following interesting facts are extracted from a letter from a person in a distant state; their authenticity may be depended upon:

"Since the pretexts which the Spanish officers have assigned for retaining the posts within our limits, and their objections to commence running the line of demarcation, have become subjects of public conversation in this state*, they have given rise to a variety of reflections, and attracted the public attention to certain practices of our own citizens and others, which appear connected with this refusal, and to indicate a very extensive and mischievous project against the union.

"I think it is about thirteen months, ago, that some of the Kentuckians who hold respectable state appointments, and others not in office, but who were tho't to possess influence among the people, have been very actively employed in engaging the poorer class of settlers to emigrate to the west side of the Mississippi, by promises of large donations in land and other special favours to be granted them on their arrival there. It is also well known, that numbers of our citizens have been seduced by these means from their allegiance to the United States, and have removed thither greatly to the injury of this state. It is certain besides, that these men-catchers receive themselves a fixed pecuniary consideration for every male of a certain age, which they engage and who deserts his country and becomes a Spanish subject.

"Can it be reasonably presumed that the sole object of this operation is to obtain more settlers? and what are we to think of the commandant at New Madrid giving to these deluded emigrants a further douceur of 10 dollars a month to become military servants of Spain! and what motives ought we to ascribe to those persons who have caused them thus to throw off their native allegiance, and who are continually censuring the general government, and insinuating the advantages which would result to the western country by declaring itself independent, and forming a separate alliance with France and Spain!

"These things strike so directly at the population and peace of the state as to have induced a general expectation, here, that a remedy will be applied for the evil by the legislature at their next session.

"Among those who are neither state officers nor citizens of the state, who have been active in this business of seduction, is one Powers, and a man of the name of Hamilton. The former is a subtle, artful and intriguing fellow, has, under color of trading, (when his cargoes did not amount to his expences) made frequent trips up the Ohio; has been often in this state, and seems to be intimate with characters who are engaged in this abominable speculation. This man, it is currently reported, is secretary to the Spanish commissioner who is to run the boundary line with Mr. Ellicott. Hamilton, I understand, was born in New-Jersey, carried on trade in New-York, was tried there for forgery, and emigrated thence to Alexandria, in Virginia, where he resided some time and failed for a considerable sum of money. This man left this place in January last, and I have reason to believe from letters of his which have been here, that he has since taken up his abode at Cincinnati, and its neighborhood, and that he is industrious in procuring emigrants, and sowing the seeds of dissatisfaction and revolt. He has said that he is a Spanish officer, but I incline to think that he makes this declaration to enhance his importance, and that he holds no higher office than that of an emissary, or agent for the purposes of seduction.

"There is also here a Frenchman of the name of La Chaise, who it is certain is employed in furthering an important branch of this project. He told a gentleman last winter at Pittsburg in whom he placed confidence, and wanted to engage in his measures, and who is ready to swear to the facts, that he would raise all the Indians in favor of the French, and would arm all the slaves of North-Carolina and Georgia, which he could easily do from Spain. La Chaise informed this gentleman also that he was then bound to Louisville—that he was to see general Clark, who was still a major in the French service, as well as all the officers of his legion who had been commissioned by Genet. I have since heard that these patriots have received commissions and are recruiting with vigor.

"That this La Chaise is a French emissary, seems to be rendered certain by the following: I have it from Mr. Fisher, a respectable merchant at Lexington, that he took a draft from him in the month of September last on the late minister Mr. Adet; that he presented this draft to Mr. Adet, and received from him an order addressed to an assistant in the consular office in Philadelphia, which person gave Mr. Fisher a check on the bank of North-America for the amount of La Chaise's draft.

"La Chaise, with a view perhaps to glide the more easily into respectable families, where he may have an opportunity to instill his poison without suspicion, and report what he hears and observes to his employers, has assumed the character of an instructor in music, and has really gained, under this vizor, access to many families of worth and consideration in this state.

"While on this subject, I cannot forbear to mention, that a Zachariah Coxe, under a pretence of selling and settling lands at or near the Muscle Shoals on the river Tennessee, to which he claims a right under a sale made by the state of Georgia, has enlisted a considerable number of men in the states of Tennessee and within the boundaries of North and South-Carolina; that he is well provided with fire-arms, artillery, and ammunition; and that a certain proportion of his men have engaged and are destined to act as cavalry. Whether this daring and audacious proceeding is connected with the schemes above mentioned must be left to time to determine. To me, I confess, they all seem links of the same chain or parts of the same nefarious project.

"Of another circumstance you may be likewise assured—Mr. *, who has just returned from the Chickasaw nation, saw a letter there addressed to Wolf's Friend from Governor Gayoso, informing him, that the line between Spain and the United States would not be run, until his majesty saw them secured in their territorial rights upon the broadest and most permanent basis, and that their annual presents were to set out in three days for the Chickasaw Bluff. What in the name of honesty and fair dealing has the king of Spain or don Gayoso to do with the Chickasaw nation and their limits, and for what purpose send them presents?

"You may take it for granted, that some of these facts have made a serious and deep impression on the people of this state a great majority of whom look up to the Union as to the sheet anchor of their political salvation. You may rely upon it also, that in case the projects of these emissaries should be discovered, to be the result of orders from the Spanish court, (which has heretofore been esteemed a strict observer of its engagements) and this country be driven by that court into a war, that the sound part of Kentucky will alone be found able and disposed, at the first wink of government, to sweep her forts and garrisons from the territory of the United States.

"It is however my opinion, that these are experiments only, made by persons in whom France and Spain have placed a certain degree of confidence, and vested with certain discretionary powers; and that they would not have made them, had they not been induced thereto by the conduct and conversation of certain ambitious and disappointed citizens, who would, if they could, hurl the President from his seat and change (rather than not succeed in their views) by a revolution, the constitution of their country; and that should these agents, transmit honest and faithful reports to their respective courts of the temper of the people, and the vast majority of them who are determined to support their own government, at all hazards of life and fortune; we shall soon see harmony and good understanding between their nations and the United States, take place of these dark and abominable practices which extinguish confidence and engender wars."

NEW-YORK, AUGUST 8.

IMPORTANT!

A gentleman in town has received letters by one of the latest arrivals, which mention, that in consequence of intelligence from Paris, great hopes are entertained that all the differences subsisting between the United States and France will soon be amicably adjusted, as matters were in train and considerable for that end for effecting so desirable an event—No names are mentioned—but it was thought that a communication had been commenced between the minister of foreign relations and general Pinckney.

Another letter, of a date posterior to the above, mentions the same—and adds that orders were actually given in France, to cease privateering against American vessels—that those which had been already brought in should be released—and restitution made for such as had been condemned and sold.

And another letter from Bristol by the Patty, says, that reports are in circulation, and generally credited, that a speedy settlement of the differences between us and France will take place—and that within a very short time, it was believed, that American commerce would be freed from all interruption.

A dreadful fire has recently happened at Albany. About 184 buildings are stated to have been burnt, of which 84 were dwelling houses.

General Kosciusko was to have embarked on board the Light-House, capt. Haff, which was to sail from Bristol about the 18th June, for New-York, but he afterwards, with two Polish noblemen, and their servants engaged a passage on board the Adriana, captain Lee, for Philadelphia, which was also to sail from Bristol on the 18th or 20th.

MARRIED—On Thursday evening last, WILLIAM B. PAGE, Esq. of Loudoun County, to the accomplished Miss NANCY LEE, of this town.
